Welcome to contact us & your great suggestions, to perfect our production & management system.

Hydraulic Mountings

Hydraulic Mountings are filled with a fluid gel or liquid. Hydraulic mounts are designed to dampen and absorb engine vibrations before they reach the chassis. Their primary use is motors that produce a lot of high and low frequency vibration, and are preferred in vehicles that require noise to be at a minimum level. This type of mounting is most commonly used in the automotive industry, as they can be tuned to offer better performance over a broader range of conditions than standard rubber engine mounts, which tend to be selected to offer optimum performance over a relatively narrow range of conditions.

Transmission Mountings

Transmission Mountings are made of a solid rubber cushion bolted to the engine transmission and chassis via steel-backed plates. The combination of materials allows movement and flexibility, minimises shocks to the system, and can extend the engine and other vehicle components more life. These type of engine mountings are robust and holds the engine in place and absorbs vibration and noise well for a relatively low cost.

Control Arm Bushings

Control arms are what hold the wheels of the car in place and help dictate the steering movement of the vehicle. The bushings are what connect the control arms to the frame of the vehicle and help the wheels stay on the road through rough terrain. Control arm bushings usually consist of an outer metal sleeve, a durable rubber and an inner metal sleeve. Control arm bushings are important for driving comfort and handling. They cushion the suspension system which in turn controls noise and vibrations, and also provide a softer ride over bumps. Bushings can flex and move while retaining stiffness and the ability to return to their original shape and position. The rubber bush for the suspension can be pressed into a housing or TCA (Track Control Arm), which will provide compliance between the inner and outer metals in the radial, axial, torsion and conical directions.

Strut Mountings

Strut Mountings is a component that attaches the suspension strut to the vehicle. In addition, it insulates the tire noise & vibrations from the vehicle. A strut mount is like a sandwich. One side bolts to the vehicle, the other side to the strut. In the middle is a rubber-like insulating material. So as the vehicle moves and goes over bumps, the up & down impact pushes and pulls at the mount. The mount's job is to cushion the impacts to reduce the vibration and noise that could transmit into the vehicle. Our Strut Mounts are engineered to overcome noise, solve installation problems, and provide long-lasting performance.

Strut (Protection) Kits

Strut kits work as a fixing point for the top of the vehicle's strut assembly to the chassis and insulate noise and vibration from the tyres and vehicle. Autoequip Comprehensively improves driving stability, improves driving pleasure and comfort. Autoequip understands the need of quality for safety critical components, so all our products are manufactured to meet / exceed OE Specification. Only the best raw material is used in our factories for production and all components are put through a strictly applied testing process. To ensure the job can be completed we sell complete kits which include Dust cover, PU buffer, Bearing and Strut Mounting.

Steering Boots

Steering boots are protective rubber covers which seal each end of the steering rack. They seal out dirt and water and protect seal components at either end of the rack and pinion assembly. If the boot is damaged and tears, then the foreign contaminants will be allowed to access and may cause accelerated wear and tear of other rack components. autoequip Steering Rack boots are designed for long lasting protection, durability and strength to match or exceed the OEM performance.

Trailing Arm Bush

The trailing arm bushing allows your car's rear trailing arms (which locate the rear suspension and tire) to move up and down over road surfaces and bumps, and allow for compression of the rear coil spring when the car is heavily loaded. Though a bearing could be used in this place, the rubber bushing is generally much more durable, and also serves the dual purpose of the rubber cushioning or absorbing some of the impacts from the road. But these bushings live in a harsh environmental spot, right in front of the rear wheels, subject to road salt, dirt, grit, water, and temperature extremes from well below freezing, to over 100 degrees on a warm day. It's a hard job, but bushings have been doing that for well over a century in most auto designs.
